Three times in 2010 Congress missed its own deadlines and failed to stop cuts in Medicare payments for physician services until after the cuts took effect. Now, a cut of almost 30% will take effect by the end of the year unless Congress takes action right after the elections. Because Congress has repeatedly failed to deal with these devastating cuts, it has been difficult for doctors to keep their offices running—and that threatens your access to health care. This is not the way to manage a program that is so important to the health of America's seniors!
